

Warm Greetings from the University of Cologne (Germany).

The Regional offices of the University of Cologne in India & South Asia, China, and Egypt, invites you for an online interactive information session on the "Cologne Graduate School of Ageing Research (CGA)", on 28th September 2022. The event will disseminate information about the research areas of the graduate school, research profiles of the faculties, and the various structural and financial support opportunities for existing and prospective young researchers, faculties, and post-Doctoral aspirants.

The Cologne Graduate School for Ageing Research (CGA) is a joint project of the partners Max Planck Institute for Biology of Ageing, Max Planck Institute for Metabolism Research and Cluster of Excellence on Cellular stress response in Ageing-associated Disease (CECAD). CGA trains a new generation of biomedical scientists to unravel the basic molecular mechanisms underlying ageing and age-related diseases. The Graduate school offers a funded structured 3-year doctoral programme and consists of seminars and courses in ageing research, writing and presentation training as well as practical career development opportunities. The CGA strives to foster scientific independence in the students by immersing them in high quality research, and encouraging critical thinking skills, lively exchange with other scientists and active participation. The Cologne Graduate School of Ageing Research also offers a Master Fellowship programme for excellent and motivated students who wish to learn more about ageing research, while pursuing the Master studies in the Biological Science or Biochemistry Master programmes of the University of Cologne.

Dr. Daniela Morick, Max Planck Institute for Biology of Ageing, coordinator of Cologne Graduate School of Ageing Research (CGA) & PhD Officer, will interact with the interested participants.

The event's target audience is prospective Bachelor's & Masters's students, young researchers, and faculty from India, South Asia, China, and Egypt.

E-mailed Registration: lgju@uni-koeln.de

Deadline: 22nd September 2022

We will appreciate it if you may also share the details of the workshop with your colleagues. We highly count on your support to make this event relevant and interesting for your research career!

With Kind Regards.
